

Lansing Police Public Information Director

Robert Merritt, a retired Lansing Police Officer, is the department's Public Information Director. Mr. Merritt reports directly to the Chief of Police. The Public Information Director is responsible for any and all communication to the media as it pertains to the Lansing Police Department. The Public Information Director is the vital communication link between the Police Department and the community.

The Public Information Director in a sense is the Liaison between the Chief of Police, the Lansing Police Department employees, City departments, media outlets, outside agencies/organizations, and the community conveying information related to events involving the Lansing Police Department and its activities.

Mr. Merritt as the Public Information Director is responsible for updating and maintains the Lansing Police Department's web site/page. As a continued service to the community, Officer Merritt relays pertinent information to the community by using Social Media as it relates to the Lansing Police Department.
